

Today, we got to watch other people's choreography and show our own. After doing our piece, we discussed more about how we could elaborate on it. Our piece is just about being in a community, and how we work better together than when we are alone. So originally, we were going to start out with solos and then come together, but I think we might change that and just be together for the whole piece. I love counterpoints in duets and trios, so we are going to add that in our new part. We also need to use more of the stage. An interesting concept that was recommended was doing the one part of the dance facing different directions and multiple parts of the stage. I think that would be cool if we did that in different formations to highlight us building each other up. Our final idea relates to our music choice. Doing fast paced, sharp movements to slow, flowy music gives a really cool contrast that we want to incorporate into our piece. We got a lot of helpful feedback that will take our dance to the next level and will show our storyline much better.
