

The End (May 2016)

Graphite, Acrylic paint & found objects on canvas

This artwork was created based off how much I cherish music. My inspiration when creating this artwork was based off one of my previous artworks. I have always been inspired by surrealistic artwork and wanted to create something that would represent me. My motivation when creating this art work was to represent how important music is to me. In my artwork I drew a man and replaced his head with a record. I placed broken CD's around the man, to help the drawing stand out. I wanted to incorporate different objects to represent music and also reflect me as a person. Throughout my high school year's people have known me as a huge fan of The Beatles, which is why I decided to use a record from them. The title of my artwork is the name of a song in the album Abbey Road which is the record I used in my art. The meaning behind it is representing my senior year, and the end of high school.
