The use of the movements in our choreography serves to communicate our main message in many ways, which is that through our individuality we unite as one. In our dance we start coming together which shows that we are uniting as one but during that part we have one individual walking through us. We end up grabbing her and catching her when she falls which shows that throughout this dance we are all there for each other but are different at the same time. We will always be there for the other person and unite as one in the end.
