Young Audiences at Sixty-Five

Young Audiences Arts for Learning (YA) began in 1952 as a provider of classical music programs for school-aged children in the city of Baltimore. Today, YA's national network of 31 affiliate organizations is the largest arts-in-education program provider in the nation. Reaching some five million students annually in suburban, urban, and rural communities across 26 states, YA's affiliate network draws upon the talent of more than 3,500 teaching artists and the experience of over 63,000 professional educators. Together, these dedicated individuals offer students across the United States access to in-depth, arts-integrated learning experiences aligned with art forms ranging from theater to photography to digital design. By making the arts a reliable component of learning in key literacies such as reading, writing, and mathematics, Young Audiences provides young people with innovative ways to learn, understand, interpret, and apply core content knowledge. Because of the unbounded potential to expand learning for all students regardless of their age, economic means, racial or ethnic background, or their past academic standing, Young Audiences continues to strengthen its national network through professional learning initiatives and to advocate on behalf of the entire field of arts-in-education at the local, state, and national levels. On behalf of the entire Young Audiences community, we thank you for your generous support of our 2017 65th Anniversary Gala Dinner Celebration and for the additional funding you provide throughout the year. Your support helps close the opportunity gap for millions of young people each year. It is on their behalf that we thank you for making everything we do possible.
