Why study the arts?

The arts capture and express unique qualities of the human experience. The Arts provide a universal language that all humans understand; expression through the arts has been a critical component of the human experience across time, cultures and places. The arts encompass the following philosophical foundations: Communication, Creative Personal Realization, Culture, History and Connectors, Means to Wellbeing, and Community Engagement. Learning in the arts helps students become engaged, creatively productive and empathetic individuals and global citizens.

The National Core Arts Standards provide an avenue for artistic literacy. Standards embody the key concepts, processes and traditions of study in each subject area, and articulate the aspirations of those invested in our schools—students, teachers, administrators, and the community at large. To realize that end goal, the voluntary National Core Arts Standards are framed by a definition of artistic literacy that includes philosophical foundations and lifelong goals, artistic processes and creative practices, anchor and performance standards that students should attain, and model cornerstone assessments by which they can be measured.

Philosophical Foundations and Lifelong Goals

The philosophical foundations and lifelong goals establish the basis for the standards and illuminate artistic literacy by expressing the overarching common values and expectations for learning in arts education across the five arts disciplines: Dance, Media Arts, Music, Theatre and Visual Arts. The philosophical foundations represent the core principles on which the standards are based; the lifelong goals represent knowledge and skill outcomes that a quality arts education will produce over a lifetime. For each foundational statement there is a corresponding lifelong goal.
This matrix illustrates how study in the arts can be a lifetime endeavor:

<td>In today’s multimedia society, the arts are the media, and therefore provide powerful and essential means of communication. The arts provide unique symbol systems and metaphors that convey and inform life experience (i.e. the arts are ways of knowing).</td>
<td>Artistically literate citizens use a variety of artistic media, symbols and metaphors to independently create and perform work that expresses and communicates their own ideas, and are able to respond by analyzing and interpreting the artistic communications of others.</td>

<tr>
<td>Participation in each of the arts as creators, performers, and audience members enables individuals to discover and develop their own creative capacity, thereby providing a source of lifelong satisfaction.</td>
<td>Artistically literate citizens find at least one arts discipline in which they develop sufficient competence to continue active involvement in creating, performing, and responding to art as an adult.</td>

<td>Throughout history the arts have provided essential means for individuals and communities to express their ideas, experiences, feelings and deepest beliefs. Each discipline shares common goals, but approaches them through distinct media and techniques. Understanding artwork provides insights into individuals' own and others' cultures and societies, while also providing opportunities to access, express, and integrate meaning across a variety of content areas.</td>
<td>Artistically literate citizens know and understand artwork from varied historical periods and cultures, and actively seek and appreciate diverse forms and genres of artwork of enduring quality/significance. They also seek to understand relationships among the arts, and cultivate habits of searching for and identifying patterns, relationships between the arts and other knowledge.</td>

<tr>
<td>The arts provide means for individuals to collaborate and connect with others in an enjoyable inclusive environment as they creat, prepare, and share artwork that bring communities together.</td>
<td>Artistically literate citizens seek artistic experience and support the arts in their local, state, national, and global communities.</td>

Why It Matters to You

- Philosophical foundations provide the basis for the standards and produce the outcomes of lifelong goals.
- Foundations and Goals provide strong statements for advocating/supporting education in the arts.
- The Philosophical Foundations and Lifelong goals frame the arts standards in a real-world context and point the way to artistic literacy.

Things to Consider

- The National Core Arts Standards are grounded in research and deeply held beliefs about the arts as expressed in the Philosophical Foundations and Lifelong Goals.
- The Philosophical Foundations and Lifelong Goals are woven throughout the standards, which are housed in a freely available web-based home that enables adaptation of content and promotes easy access to applicable research, buoyed by additional resources and informational material.
- The Philosophical Foundations and Lifelong Goals form the basis for the entire standards structure; from Artistic Processes to Anchor Standards, to grade-level performance standards and accompanying materials such as enduring understandings, essential questions and model cornerstone assessments.

Reflection Questions

- How do the arts relate to and enrich your life? Our collective lives?
- How do the arts communicate meaning?
- How does arts learning enhance or facilitate learning in other disciplines?
- In what ways do the arts create communities?

Resources for Attending to Access

The central purposes of education standards are to identify the learning that we want for all students and to drive improvement in the system that delivers that learning. Every student should have access to instruction in all art forms, which should be represented within the curricula of every school across the nation, and students should develop competence in all four Artistic Processes through instruction in each art form. Opportunity to Learn standards help encourage equitable delivery of arts education by outlining the resources necessary for students to succeed, illustrating a continuum of programming, allowing for program review, and articulating the basis for a comprehensive arts education.

In addition, the National Core Arts Standards website provides guidance on attending to the instructional needs of all learners with resources for teaching exceptional children. Additional resources may be found on the National Association for Gifted Children website; which offers a Position Statement on Arts Education for Gifted and Talented Students.
