

HOW DID YOUR PERSONAL IDEAS CONTRIBUTE TO YOUR FINAL PRODUCT?

1. I've never been a fan of math because it's so rigid. It's either you do it the right way or the wrong way. It's for that reason it's my worst subject. I think because I am more inclined to music and art, I prefer to think creatively, which obviously is not a part of math. The rigidity of math is unnatural to me. These ideas all contributed to my final piece.

HOW DO ARTISTS CONTRIBUTE TO SOCIAL CHANGE?

2. Artists contribute to social change by manifesting ideas of change, which allows them to be expressed and spread to others more easily. That helps social movements. Artists who depict social change may inspire others, and even if they don't, their art shares their ideas. A perfect example of this is political cartoons, especially of the early 20th century. With lack of a unifying force otherwise, these cartoons showed the political unrest of newly industrialized America, which helped solve the problems by bringing them to light.

HOW DOES ARTWORK CREATE OR COMMUNICATE A GROUP'S IDENTITY?

3. Similar to contributing to social change, art contributes to a group's identity by expressing its perspective for others to understand. Concepts that may be difficult for outsiders of the group to grasp can be more easily understood through art. This better helps create the group's identity by showing what they are trying to project as a group.
